

The Advantages Of Going Modular* by Constance Capshaw

Copyright 2006 Constance Capshaw – Public Domain to be published in its entirety

The Many Advantages of Modular Homes

The industry of modular homes is growing and advancing every day, and homes are being built across the United States and Canada. There are some great benefits to going with a modular home over a site built home. Not only can the modular home direction save funds in actual construction costs, but it may also save a lot of time. Since there's such opportunity for lower costs, a lower potential for problems (caused by weather damage and possible vandalism during building), energy efficiency and better quality, people in and out of the industry are beginning to be aware of the amazing value of modular homes.

Often, today's modular homes look like any traditionally built home you may see. With new technology in building processes, manufacturers of modular homes should be able to build almost any design to nearly any specification. From a simplified rambler style home to an extremely customized Victorian model, floor plans for modular homes can be modified to fit any potential buyer's needs.

There are several advantages and benefits to a modular home over conventionally built ones. Not only are they more rapidly and efficiently completed, they are extremely energy efficient and are high quality in that they're built in an environment that is controlled with a variety of in-plant inspections and examinations. Many modular manufacturers are out there to any homeowner who is looking at building a modular home.

Constructed by a variety of homebuilders in a national network of plants with a great deal of quality control, Champion Homes are built and sold in the United States and areas of Canada in about 2,500 retail locations. With a desire to be leaders in a constantly changing and developing industry, they're committed to giving remarkable design, customer service and quality to their houses.

Fleetwood is dedicated to both the art of home building and to the families who live in them. With a dedication to providing their homes with the best building materials and their clients and customers their very Best customer service, they are a company that implements their own Total Quality Management business approach.

Constantly striving to honestly be aware of what people want, Skyline Homes are devoted to making owning a home a possibility for everybody. Their factory built houses allow value and new style concepts to fit most any homeowner who is looking for high quality and reasonably priced home.

As the industry continues to change and grow, modular houses are continually getting better and better. Manufacturers are committed to making owning a home a reality for more families every day. There are so many benefits to going the modular route that any potential homebuyer looking for a new house should most definitely weigh their potential.

About the Author

Constance Capshaw is a content writer that writes and does research on a variety of subject matters in regard to the consistently growing modular home industry. At <http://modularhomefinder.com>, she provides information on issues from manufacturers like Clayton Homes to landscaping and yard ideas.